TTPC 2020 Wins

Black Motherhood in times of Quarantine

TTPC Member: Krishna Davenport started this series to highlight the stories and real-time feelings of Black Mothers during these times of quarantine in three words. Check her out at @baobabwellness on IG.

Black Women Rise: Honest Discussions About Race and Work

TTPC Members: Sarah Morgan, Kimberly Codrington, Keirsten Greggs, Jazmine Wilkes, and Tiffany Toussaint joined me on a panel for TA Global Gathering in June. We showed twice during the conference and it was a huge success. Many of these ladies have landed other international gigs since.

The Absurdity of Doing You: A Playbook in Rebel Elegance for the Evolving Soul and Purposeful Human

I dropped my pre-order campaign for my book this past Wednesday. This book is about my emergence, metamorphosis, and ascension and the lessons I gleaned from every chapter along the way.

TTPC One Vision

Membership

My vision for Talent Think Power Circle (TTPC) is for this to be an official organization for women who identify as BIPOC. To execute some of the core values I have illustrated here we need to move to a membership model. Dues will be for the year.

Collaboration

It is my hope that TTPC becomes a place for members to network and collaborate with one another in an effort to further your own individual endeavors and our collective reach

Education

TTPC started off as a cohort. It is my wish to continue offering our members opportunities to learn new skills and upskill as a group to ensure all members thrive.

Philanthropy

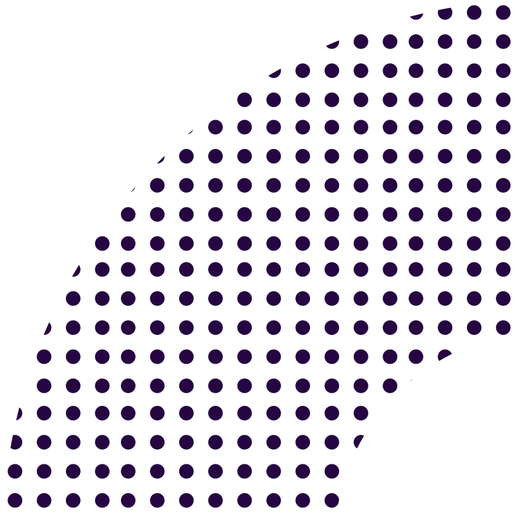
"To whom much is given, much is required." TTPC will be partnering with select organizations to ensure we are an organization that reaches back to uplift BIPOC women.

Events/Retreats

TTPC will eventually hold a yearly summit for the public and retreat for members to get away, connect and have some fun in unison.

Black Privilege Manifesto

I'm Black and proud of it. I'm a person of color and proud of it. I will no longer worry about white privilege or any other similar systems created as forces against me. They're useless illusions that do nothing more than to keep my mind enslaved, my emotions irrational and my spirit unsettled. I have Black Privilege. I am powerful. I'm spiritual. I am come from a long line of survivors and pioneers. I'm no longer just surviving, I'm transcending to thriving. I'm done choosing my words carefully. I'm done presenting myself in a particular way to suit your monochromatic views. I am done showing up as less than a whole person because showing up in full intimidates you. I am not here to educate you on why you hold the ideas, biases and hate that you do. In fact, I no longer care to impress you. You are no longer my focus. My focus and consciousness is shifting daily. It will take some time, but I will get there. I will not spend any more time striving to be anything but my best self. Please know that any such changes will be done in the interest of self-love; not societal acceptance. My eyes are on securing a better future for our young kings and queens. My hair, my skin, my aesthetic will be worn proudly and boldly for as long as I breathe. I will pour into my community without concern for whether I appear to be "pro-black". I am Pro-Black and I am pro-humans, but I will not allow another human to rob me or my community of our dignity, pride or identity anymore. I will foster unity. I choose authenticity over responsibility for your feelings. I am educated. I am able. I am done taking cents on the dollar for my efforts. I will direct my hard-earned dollars back to my community and if it must leave it will go to businesses who have earned our collective trust and attention. I'm not the villain. I'm a human being. I beat the odds. I am hopeful and more importantly I am alive. I am the majority, not the minority. The shackles have been released. From now on, I am not looking to take a cue from you. I am relying on my infinite knowledge and the finite privilege I have to make a difference. It is my birthright to be free and exactly who I was meant to be.



Thank You!

I look forward to building with you.
